Dreamweaver I have used Dreamweaver for the past ten years or so. It has an extremely intuitive interface that makes it an excellent tool for creating web content. Its drag-and-drop interface makes it a simple way to design a website. Dreamweaver can create web pages, fill in form fields, and insert links. You can also create databases and upload images and documents into a web page. You can also create separate style sheets and separate _.htc_ or _.css_ files for your web pages. When working in Dreamweaver, you can create a simple page or use the other features to design a much more complex project. You can design in Adobe Flash if you want to create a site that will play videos or other audio files. You can also design a site that is fluid and adaptive, which means it will change when you view it on a wide screen or a small screen. When you have finished creating the web page, you need to upload it, so make sure you have all the files ready before you click the Save icon. The easiest way to upload an image or other file is to drag it from the Finder to the Dreamweaver workspace. You can also select the files in the Finder, highlight them, and choose Open in Dreamweaver from the File menu. Dreamweaver can be complex, so make sure you work on smaller projects first. Dreamweaver's abilities are easily overlooked, so you might be able to create a simple page or upload a few files and then realize that you can't do anything more than that.

How to get started with Photoshop Elements If you want to edit photographs you should get yourself Photoshop Elements and start using it to create high-quality images. It has all the features of Photoshop but also has advanced tools that are not provided by the professional version of the software. It is easy to use and learn for beginners. The interface is also much easier to understand than Photoshop's. In this tutorial, we will explore the different layers and channels, and some of the different editing features of Photoshop Elements. This tutorial focuses on Photoshop Elements 10 and above. We assume you already know basic terminology and the basic functions of Photoshop Elements. To find these, click on the help icon. The first step to take before editing your images is to create a new document. Using Photoshop Elements There are three main interfaces you will work with. The Layers Window The Channels Window The Histogram Step #1 - Changing the background color Select the Background tool and click on a new image to fill the whole screen with an image. It can be any picture you like. Click on OK to create a new document. To change the color of the background, there are two options: You can click on the white area in the Layers window and choose a color. You can choose a color from the Color Picker by clicking and dragging on a white area. Step #2 - Add some text Photoshop Elements has a built-in Font Picker to add text. Open it by pressing the F button. Click on Add to add a new text, and select the font you want. Step #3 - Adjust the brightness of your text Click on the Adjustments button at the bottom of the Layers window and select Brightness & Contrast. Adjust the brightness and contrast of the text using the Brightness slider at the bottom left and the Contrast slider at the bottom right. Step #4 - Add a new layer Click on New and select Layers. Step #5 - Selecting the color range To add a new layer, you must select a layer. Click on the eyedropper tool and click on the white part of the picture. The color of your selection is going to fill the whole layer. Step #6 - Click on the color strip to select the color range Click on the color 388ed7b0c7

Cleveland Cavaliers star LeBron James told reporters Sunday that his team has reached a settlement with the city of Charlotte over its use of disparaging remarks about James during that city's recent NBA All-Star Game. "I will not disclose it," James said as he departed Cleveland Browns Stadium following the Cavaliers' loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers in the NFL's Pro Bowl, via ESPN. "I just want to be at peace with Charlotte. This is the first time that I have said anything about it. I am just going to keep my mouth shut about it. I have nothing else to say about that situation." The remarks directed at James were made by Charlotte mayor Anthony Foxx during the Feb. 25 NBA All-Star Game at Time Warner Cable Arena, which the hometown Hornets won, 104-95. The remarks included Foxx saying that James had to "play in the backyard" and that the city's Charlotte Hornets "beat the (expletive)" out of him. James, who was born and raised in Akron, Ohio, and has played his entire 12-year NBA career with the Cavaliers, was not pleased with Foxx's comments and told reporters during the All-Star Game in Los Angeles that there was a "trial by media" that resulted in Foxx making the comments. "I wouldn't say it's a trial by media because I don't want to throw it in his face," James said. "I mean, a lot of people are tripping. A lot of people are saying things about me.... Look, the statement that I made, I meant. It's not the time. You know what I mean? You win the All-Star Game, and you win 100 games. And you put up 50 points, and I get booed. I get booed for playing well. You play well, you get booed for not playing well. That's what I understand about it. "As I said, I don't have much room to talk about it, but I think after this (expletive) All-Star Game, I will be able to speak a little bit more." Foxx, for his part, apologized on Tuesday for the remarks, telling ABC's "Good Morning America," "I appreciate LeBron James' remarks yesterday were well stated.... I am sorry. I'm sorry for them." Charlotte's NBA franchise and the city's pro football team, the Carolina Panthers, were both founded

The present invention generally relates to an apparatus and method for connecting a hose having a connector on a first end thereof. More specifically, the present invention relates to an apparatus and method for connecting a hose having a connector on a first end thereof by way of an adapter, wherein the adapter comprises an interlocking releasable connector for operatively connecting the hose. Many fluid handling systems employ one or more fluid carrying hoses to transfer fluids from one tank to another tank, from one container to another container or from one container to another container through an intermediary device. The hoses are typically secured to a fluid handling system by means of a hose connector. Typically, the hoses may comprise a flexible hose made from rubber or plastic, such as polyvinyl chloride, wherein the hose is cut to a length that is sufficient to extend from one fluid system to the next. More specifically, the hose connector is typically secured to one end of the hose and is operatively connected to a fluid source, fluid source line or other suitable device on the fluid handling system. The other end of the hose typically has an opening therein and is connected to an adapter, wherein the adapter is connected in fluid communication with the fluid source, fluid source line or other suitable device on the fluid handling system. The adapter, typically, comprises a box that has a first end operatively connected to the hose and a second end operatively connected to the fluid source, fluid source line or other suitable device on the fluid handling system. To connect the hose to the adapter by way of an appropriate connector, generally, a housing is provided that fits on the hose and has an opening formed therethrough. The housing is sized such that the hose connector is received within the housing and operatively connected to the hose. The housing also has an opening formed therein that aligns with the opening in the hose. The adapter has a mating flange that is sized to be received within the opening formed in the housing. The adapter is further provided with a flange that is sized to be received within the opening formed in the hose. In this manner, the adapter may be connected in fluid communication with the hose. The hoses are typically provided in a variety of diameters that are identical in external diameter but significantly different in internal diameter. The hoses also typically vary in length. As a result, it may be difficult to fit an appropriate housing to the hose, wherein the housing is sized to receive the hose connector therein. Moreover, since the adapter typically must be designed to accommodate a
